

New government, new direction

So where to now for CSIRO pay and working conditions?

Australia has a new Federal Government with the election of Labor, after almost ten years of the Liberals and Nationals in power.

Under the former Coalition government, CSIRO endured record funding cuts, job losses and staffing restrictions. The imposition of regressive bargaining policies also stymied pay increases and weakened legal protections for working conditions.

So what direction will the new government take and what will that mean for enterprise agreement negotiations at CSIRO?

This August, the Staff Association is hosting a series of workplace briefings across the country.

We'll be covering Labor's pre-election commitments on federal public sector bargaining, how these may be translated into new policy and the implications for CSIRO.

To find a briefing near you, visit www.csirostaff.org.au/new-direction

All CSIRO employees are welcome to attend, especially those staff interested in learning more about the union.
